A) With an imperative: ne jura, Plaut.: — ne audeto: — ne crucia, Ter.: — mortuum in urbe ne sepelito neve urito. B) With a conjunctive expressing command: ne fiant isti viginti dies, Ter.: — ne conferas culpam in me, id. C) Expressing a wish, prayer, or the like: ne sim salvus: — ne vivam, may I not live: — ne id Jupiter sineret, Liv.: — ne umquam eorum quisque invidet commodis, Plaut.: — utinam ne, oh that — not! Ter. III. With other particles: dum ne, provided that not, as long as not, whilst not, Cic. Att. 6, 1: — also dummodo ne (see DUM): — modo ne, provided that not: — ne ... quidem, not even: in which case the emphatic word is placed between these two particles, e. g.: ne in oppidis quidem, Cic. Verr. 2, 4, 1: — ne mulieribus quidem, Cæs.: — ne virtute quidem premi, Liv.: — ne illa quidem consolatio firmissima est: — also several words or an entire clause are frequently inserted; e. g., ne si ita quidem venisset: — ne cum esset factum quidem: — cui ego esse iratus, ne, si cupiam, quidem possum: — also without separation, thus: ne quidem: ego illud ne quidem contemnā quod extremum est, Cic. Att. 2, 16: — sometimes a negative word precedes, without destroying the negation: non enim prætereundum ne id quidem, Cic. Verr. 2, 1, 60: — numquam, ne mediocri quidem cuiquam: — nolui deesse ne tacitæ quidem flagitationi tuæ: — sometimes quidem is omitted: ne admissum tum quemquam, Suet.: — in the sense of "I will not say," "not to mention:" ne connivente quidem sed etiam ... oculis intuentē, Cic. Pis. 5. IV. I. q. modo ne, dummodo ne, only not, but not, provided that not: obsides darent, ne minores quatuordecim annos, Liv. 30, 37: — ne id quod agitur, simulaverimus, id.: — ne illis sanguinem nostrum largiantur, provided they do not lavish our blood for their benefit, Sall. V. I. q. nedum, much less, to say nothing of: ne vero nihil istorum, ne juvenem quidem movit umquam: ne nunc senem, Cic. Fam. 9, 26: — With a conjunctive: ne nunc dulcedine capti ferant desiderium, Liv.: — ne quem putetis. VI. Denoting purpose; That not, in order that not, lest: id egi, ne interesset, Cic. Fam. 4, 7: — ne nihil tribuamus: — ne corrumpi possint, idcirco: — ne dicam, that I may not say, i. e. not to say. Ne, in connection with ut, is, properly speaking, an adverb; it is sometimes placed apart from ut, but always immediately before the word which it particularly bears upon: præcipiendum est igitur ut ... ne existiment, that they may not believe: — ut hoc ne facerem, that I should not do this on any consideration, Ter. VII. Expressing a prohibition. A) After verbs which express fear, anxiety, danger, etc., where we use that without a negative; there is always, as the foundation of this form of expression, a wish that the thing may not be so or may not occur: vereor ne hoc fiat, I apprehend that it may happen (but I wish it may not): metuebant ne indicarent, Cic. Mil. 21: — hic, ne quid mihi prorogetur, horreo: — sollicita est ne conspiciat: — also after substantives which imply the idea of fear, anxiety, etc.: periculum est, ne occasio detur, Nep.: — in all these cases, that not or lest is expressed by ne non or ut: veritus ne hostium impetu sustinere non posset, Cæs. B. G. 5, 47: — vereor ne exercitum firmum habere non possit: — et tamen veremur ut hoc natura patiat. B) After verbs denoting fear, foresight, or caution: cave ne studeas, Ter.: — cave ne cupias, id.: — ne quid accusandus sis, vide, ne a malis dici verius possit: — videat consul ne quid detrimenti capiat respublica: — also denoting to see, look into, examine consider whether perhaps etc.: videamus ne beata vita effici posset: — per aliquot dies ea consultatio tenuit, ne, non reddita (bona) belli causa; reddita belli materia essent, they took counsel whether the property, if not returned, might not be the cause of a war, Liv. C) After certain verbs denoting negation; esp. after those which signify to deny or answer negatively, to refuse, to hinder: sententiam ne diceret accusavit: — casus quidem ne facerem impedit, hindered my doing it: — Decii corpus ne inveniretur nox querentes oppressit, the night hindered its being found, Liv.: — unus ne caperetur urbs causa fuit, was the sole cause that hindered the capture of the town, id.

3. NĒ [In poetry we often find it apocopated: egon', viden', for egone, videsne] As an interrogative particle, enclitic. I. In a simple interrogation, directly interrogatory, with an indicative: videturne hoc tibi verum esse? does this (indeed) appear to you true? — and also with a subjunctive: putaresne umquam accidere posse, ut? can you suppose that? — Indirectly interrogatory, with a conjunctive: ut videamus satisne ista sint justa? II. In a double or complex interrogation, when it takes after it the interrogatory particles an, annon, nec ne; in a direct question: Romanne venio, an hic maneo, an Arpinum fugiam? — honestumne factu an turpe? — ne is sometimes used in the second question for an: justitiene prius mirer belline laborum, Virg.: — If the second question contains simply a negation without a verb, this is expressed by annon: isne est quem quero, annon, Ter.: — In an indirect question: nescio gratulerne tibi, an timeam: — If the second question contains simply a negation without a verb, this is expressed by an non or nec ne: roga velintne annon uxorem? Ter.: — nescio tun' scias an non? Plaut.: — cogitato emitteresne necne eum servom manu? id.: — the verb is not unfrequently repeated: videndum 'st utrum eas velintne, annon velint, id.: — queritur sint ne dii, nec ne sint. — [The poets sometimes join ne to words to which it does not belong: scamnum faceretne Priapum, a bench or a Priapus, Hor.: — this ne is also frequently appended to other words, e. g. to the pronouns qui, quæ, quod, Plaut.: — also to quia, Virg.]

PRÆTOR, ōris. m. (for prætor from præeo) Any leader, head, chief, a governor. I. A civil officer; a consul, Liv. 3, 55. — A dictator: p. maximus, id. — The governor of Capua, Cic. Agr. 2, 34: — p. Thessalus, Cæs.: — Of the Suffetes in Carthage, Nep. — Esp.: A Prætor, a chief magistrate at Rome, elected, for the first time, A. U. C. 389, in the comitia curiata, from the patricians (after A. U. C. 416 from the plebeians also). In rank, the prætor was next to the consuls, with whom he was associated in the administration of justice, and whose place he supplied during the absence of the latter from Rome. The prætor was attended in the city by two lictors, with the fasces: out of the city, by six. He wore a toga prætexta. The business of the prætor having greatly increased, a second was chosen about the year A. U. C. 490, whose office it was to decide causes between foreigners, or between citizens and foreigners. Hence, the latter was called p. peregrinus, while the former (p. urbanus) administered justice in private causes between Roman citizens only. The exercise of the prætorian authority was signified by the words, do, dico, addico; do, when the prætors granted licence to institute a process of trial or examination; dico, when they pronounced a sentence; addico, when they awarded the goods of a debtor to a creditor. When the Roman dominions had extended beyond the confines of Italy, prætors were appointed for the administration of justice in the provinces, of whom the first two were sent to Sicily and Sardinia in the year A. U. C. 526; and two were sent to Spain in A. U. C. 556. By Sylla the number of prætors was increased to eight, and afterwards to ten; by Cæsar, to sixteen. Under Augustus there were sometimes ten, sometimes fourteen, and sometimes eighteen. — Prætores ærarii were appointed by Augustus, but their office ceased again under Claudius, Suet. Aug. 36; Tac.: — Prætores fidei commissorum, were appointed by Claudius, Suet.: — a p. tutelaris was chosen by Marcus Aurelius, Capit. II. A military officer, chief, commander-in-chief, esp. of the foreign or auxiliary troops, Cic. Div. 1, 54; Liv.; Nep.: — legatus pro prætore, Cæs.: — questor pro prætore, Sall.

QUUM or CUM [old orthography, quom]. a relative adv. (qui) I. Of time: When, whenever, after, since, as soon as, at the time that, etc. A) With an indicative: qui non defendit injuriam neque propulsat a suis, quum potest, injuste facit, Cic. Off. 3, 18: — majora illa, quum aguntur, quam quum leguntur, videri solent: — quum penes unum est omnium summa rerum, regem illum unum vocamus... quum autem est penes delectos, tum illa civitas optimationum arbitrio regi dicitur: — tum, quum Sicilia florebat opibus: — quum recte navigari poterit, tum naviges: — quum hic in me incidit, quum complexus est conspersitque lacrimis nec loqui prae mœrore potuit! — (Verres) quum ad aliquod oppidum venerat, eadem lectica usque in cubiculum deferabatur: — multi anni sunt, quum ille in ære meo est, since, since that: — conf. aliquot sunt anni, quum vos duos elegi, quos præcipue colerem; and, jam anni quadringenti sunt, quum hoc accidit: — fuit quoddam tempus, quum in agris passim homines bestiarum more vagabantur: — quum primum dati sunt iudices. — Thus, in animated narratives: legebam tuas epistolas, quum mihi epistola affertur a Lepta, Cic. Att. 9, 12: — dixerat hoc ille, quum puer nunciavit venire ad eum Lælium: — quum subito manus illa Clodiana exclamat. B) In historical narrative, to denote the connection of two actions as cause and effect, i. e. when one action is the result of the other, etc., in which case the imperf. and plusquamperf. of the subjunctive are used: Zenonem, quum Athenis essem, audiebam frequenter, Cic. N. D. 1, 21: — quum tridui viam processisset, nunciatum est ei etc. Cæs.: — quum in hanc sententiam pedibus omnes issent, tum demum literæ a Terentio consule allatæ sunt, Liv.: — Sometimes we find the indicative instead: illum hausi dolorem, quum Q. Metellus abstraheretur... quum eriperetur... quum significabat. C) Observe the following phrases. 1) Quum (cum) maxime (also as one word, quummaxime), particularly, especially: nunc quum maxime, at present particularly so, Cic.: — quæ fuerit quum maxime, which happens very frequently now: — paretque quum maxime mortuo, even now. 2) Quum... tum, as... so also, not only... but also, both... and: quæ (virtus) quum in paucis est, tum in paucis iudicatur et cernitur, Cic. Rep. 1, 34: — quum ob ea, quæ ad te scripsi, tum quod Cæsar adest: — quum omnes belli Mars communis et quum semper incerti exitus preliorum sunt: — tum hoc tempore ita magnæ utrimque copię esse dicuntur etc.: — quum... tum etiam: — quum... tum vero: — quum... tum nimirum. II. Quum is also used as a causal particle, with a subjunctive: Since, because, as: quum sit in nobis consilium, ratio, prudentia, necesse est deum hæc ipsa habere majora, Cic. N. D. 2, 31: — quæ quum ita sint: — sed quum statuissem scribere ad te aliquid hoc tempore, multa posthac, ab eo ordiri volui maxime: — de hoc tu videbis, quippe quum de me ipso ac de meis te considerare velim: — thus, utpote quum sine febris laborassem.

R.

R, r, in many words has been formed from s; hence the two forms of honos and honor, arbos and arbor, lepos and lepor, quæso and quesumus for quæro and quærimus; in like manner dirimo is formed from dis-emo. — R is sometimes assimilated with l; hence, libellus from liber, intelligo from inter-lego, pellicio from per-lacio. — R is also used for d; as, meridies for medidies. — R, as an abbreviation, stands in most cases for Romanus: or R. P., res publica. — [In Med.: R or R̄ for Recipe, Take.]

Ita fit, ut r. præsit, appetitus obtemperet, Cic. Off. 1, 28:—homo rationis est particeps:—vi rationis:—acumen, solertiam, quam rationem vocamus:—lex est r. summa:—eadem r. lex est:—mens et r. et consilium:—r., consilium, prudentia:—alqd loci rationi et consilio dedisses:—non r. nec consilium:—illa revoces ad rationem:—consilio et ratione:—iracundia, videlicet dissidens a ratione:—hominum r.:—minari divisoribus r. non erat, was not compatible with reason, was not prudent, Cic. Verr. 2, 1, 9:—nulla r. est, with an objective clause:—quod domi te inclusisti, ratione fecisti, hast acted prudently or conformably to reason:—Hence, b) a) A rational ground, a reason, motive: quid tandem habuit argumenti aut rationis res, quamobrem in eo potissimum Sthenianum præmium poneretur? Cic. Verr. 2, 2, 47:—nostra confirmare argumentis ac rationibus:—noverit argumentorum et rationum locos:—consilii causa r.que:—r. querenda:—quam habet rationem improbitatis atque impudentiæ?—facti alquam rationem afferre:—nihil rationis affert, quamobrem:—non deest copia rationum:—tertiam rationem affertis, quod:—rationem subjicit:—nihil nisi summa ratione facere:—r. in ea disputatione a te collectæ vetabant me reipublicæ penitus diffidere, Cic. Fam. 5, 13, 3:—r. disputationibus huc illuc trahantur:—rationibus conquistis:—cum disputando rationibusque docere:—his rationibus tam certis tamque illustribus opponuntur labores. β) Dialect.: A reason, ground, argument: quum considerato genere causa scripti an rationis habeat controversiam, videris; deinceps erit videndum, quæ questio, quæ r., quæ iudicatio, quod firmamentum causæ sit... R. est, quæ continet causam, quæ si sublata sit, nihil in causa controversiæ relinquitur, hoc modo: Orestes si accusetur matricidii, nisi hoc dicat, Jure feci, illa enim patrem meum occiderat, non habet defensionem, Cic. Inv. 1, 13, 18:—ad propositum subiecta r., et item in distributis supposita r. c) Consistency with reason, reasonable conduct, reasonableness; a principle, rule: in omnibus, quæ ratione decenter et via, primum constituendum est, quid quidque sit, in a rational manner, according to some rule or principle, rationally, Cic. de Or. 33:—ut ratione et via procedat oratio:—modo et ratione omnia facere:—ratione et numero moveri:—intervallis imparibus, sed tamen pro rata parte ratione distinctis, at intervals, although unequal, still according to rule and in proper proportions:—moderata ratione, in equal proportion:—in quo defuit fortasse r., sed tamen vincit ipsa rerum publicarum natura sæpe rationem, a course or development according to reason:—ad vitam usumque vivendi ea descripta r. est. d) A doctrine, theory, system; (more rarely) knowledge: erat enim tunc hæc nova et ignota r., solem lunæ oppositum solere deficere, Cic. Rep. 1, 16:—nova r.:—r. oratioque:—animum conferre in istam rationem:—sine ulla arte aut ratione:—in artibus ac rationibus:—laus rationis aut scientiæ:—continet totam hanc questionem ea r.:—Epicuri r., doctrine, system, philosophy:—formula Stoicorum rationi disciplinaque consentanea:—Cynicorum r.:—r. Cynicorum:—de ratione vivendi, method or course of life founded on reason:—r. civilis et disciplina populorum, politics:—vitæ r.:—Subj.: si qua (est in me) exercitatio dicendi aut si hujus rei r. alga, ab optimarum artium studiis ac disciplina profecta, Cic. Arch. 1. e) A view, opinion: inventus est nemo, cujus non hæc et sententia esset et oratio, non esse metuendum... Hæc cum omnes sentirent et cum in eam rationem pro suo quisque sensu ac dolore loqueretur, Cic. Verr. 2, 1, 27:—duabus epistolis tuis perdiligenter in eandem rationem scriptis. f) A course of reasoning, argumentation: (Epicurus) tollit definitiones; nihil de dividendo ac partiendo docet; non quo modo efficiatur concludaturque r., tradit, Cic. Fin. 1, 7:—concludatur igitur r.:—summa unius cujusque rationis:—r. ipsa cogat:—ut r. cogit. [Hence, Ital. ragione, Fr. ratiōn, raison.]
